

TRIP TO THE NATIONAL GALLERY

What an amazing way to start August! Our preschool room had the opportunity to join in a fantastic story telling about Jacopo Tintoretto's painting at the National Gallery. We were thrilled to bring back some of our big trips, offering new exciting cultural experiences to the children. In this occasion, we had the extra help of one of our mums Jessica, who works for the Gallery. It was magical to finally see in the museum all the different paintings that we "studied" in the nursery like "the sunflowers" of Van Gogh or "The water lilies" of Monet.

From the trip on the underground to the lunch in the school spot, we have created new memories that would remain in our hearts forever. There is no better way to get our children closer to the world of Art than offering this incredible experience.

We would like to take the opportunity to thank our brave parents that came along with us. We hope you enjoyed the trip as much as we did.

We can't wait for the next adventure to come!!

*Nice trip on the underground,
counting the stations and
greeting the driver*

Fiona explain the golden rules in the Gallery before our session

*Spotting animals
in the different paintings*

*“St. George and the Dragon” storytelling along with Tintoretto’s
painting*

Extra thank you to Jessica for supporting us in making this wonderful visit possible. We will come back!!
